Youth Chaplain's Corner

Dearly beloved in Christ,

In Philippians 1:9–10, we read, “And this is my prayer: that your love may overflow more and more with knowledge and full insight to help you determine what is best...”

The Apostle Paul, writing from a prison cell, opens his letter to the Philippians not with complaints or self-pity, but with a prayer—gentle, pastoral, and full of affection.

Though isolated and suffering, his heart remains with his people. His greatest concern is not his own hardship, but their spiritual growth. This is the mark of a true shepherd: one who intercedes on behalf of his flock even in the midst of his own trials.

In this short prayer, Paul lifts up three desires—each of which continues to guide us in our walk with Christ today.

First, Paul prays that Church love may abound more and more. This is not sentimental or shallow love, but a love shaped by deeper knowledge of Christ and rooted in life within His body, the Church. Christian love is never stagnant. It must grow—expanding in compassion, deepening in wisdom, and maturing in self-giving action. It is a love that serves, sacrifices, and endures. As we reflect on our own lives, we must ask: Is our love growing colder in a distracted world, or is it becoming more Christ-like with each passing day?

Second, Paul desires that the Church grow in discernment and learn to choose what is excellent. It is not enough to settle for what is merely permissible or culturally acceptable.

“... that your love may overflow more and more with knowledge and full insight to help you determine what is best...”

he Christian life invites us into something more: a pursuit of what is best in the eyes of God. Discernment is the ability to recognize the difference between what is simply good and what is holy. When love is rightly formed, it does not blur our vision—it sharpens it. It helps us prioritize with clarity and live with purpose, longing above all to please God.

Third, Paul prays that we would live sincere lives. The Greek word translated as “sincere” refers to something tested by sunlight—examined openly, free from hidden cracks or deceit. Paul is not calling for perfection, but for authenticity.

This is hard. He urges us to cultivate a life that is honest, transparent, and whole. A faith that can be held up to the light and not be found wanting. This leads us to ask ourselves: Are we walking in the truth of God’s presence, or merely maintaining the appearance of faith?

Paul’s prayer is not bound to the first-century church in Philippi. It speaks with just as much power to us today. May our lives overflow with love that is active and wise. May our decisions be guided by holy discernment. And may our faith be sincere, reflecting the truth and beauty of the gospel.

Let us seek what is excellent. Let us reflect Christ in all that we do. And let us walk blamelessly in the light of His grace

1. As the new academic year begins, we know the semester brings excitement, challenges, and a fresh start. In the midst of it all, I would be so happy to walk with you, right where you are. That is why we continue college campus visits next month! Stay tuned for campus-specific details via Instagram and make plans to join us!

*Parents: If you have a college freshman studying at a campus within the Northeast region, please reach out and let me know with their campus and phone number. I would be happy to connect with them and walk alongside them during this new season of life.
